

Jay Wiggins

After serving with the United States Marine Corps, Jay Wiggins began a career in law enforcement in 1990. After working three years with the Brunswick Police Department as both a patrol officer and member of an Inner City Task force, he moved to the Glynn County Police Department. He still currently serves with the Glynn County Police as a Captain and the Director of the Glynn County Emergency Management Agency.

During his time in law enforcement Jay has held many varied assignments and received a great deal of advanced training. Jay has worked in the Narcotics, Detective, Training, and Patrol Divisions. Jay also spent a period of time working in the Special Investigative Unit, where he received training from the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in dignitary protection. Jay has had the opportunity to work protective details for former U.S. Presidents and other notable persons. He also participated in his law enforcement capacity, at the 2004 G-8 summits which was held in his jurisdiction.

Jay is a Georgia P.O.S.T. Certified Law Enforcement instructor, and served as the training officer for his agency, is a N.I.M.S. and I.C.S. instructor and is also a nationally certified arson investigator. Jay is a trained hostage negotiator and still works actively with the S.W.A.T. team in this capacity. He is also a certified examiner for the computerized voice stress, a truth verification instrument. During his career Jay has also attained a B.A. from Troy State University with a major in criminal justice, and a minor in psychology.

Jay currently resides on St. Simons Island, in Georgia with his wife Jenny and two children Jake and Julia.